Friday, May 24, 2019	10:00 AM	11:00 AM	Equestrian	Class--Riding in Front of the Prince Part 1 (no horses)	During the 16th century, riding evolved from its martial origins into an art form practiced by noblemen and kings. Instead of the medieval jousts and melees, horsemen began to display their skills in carousels, ballets, and individual performances. The riding masters of the mid-16th century had definite ideas of what was proper for both horse and rider. During this class we will review different documentations about how riders showed off their own riding skills and their mount's best abilities to the royals. We will cover how to prepare and train for this kind of performance, including what documentation is required for the judges. Note: Class is based on Jennifer Jobst's documentation about horsemanship during the late period in Europe.			Equine Arena

Saturday, May 25, 2019	6:00 PM	8:00 PM	Feast	Saturday Feast - Ancient Rome	SOLD OUT - Roman cooking is one of the earliest cuisines for which we have large portions of documentable examples. Even though it's slightly earlier than the time periods we focus on within the SCA, studying it helps give insight into our medieval ancestors that we do focus on because much of the Roman practice became part of the mindset of those during the medieval times, in particular during the Renaissance. And, it was also the predecessor of much of the regional Mediterranean cuisines we see today. We look forward to presenting our research on dishes from Cato, Apicius, and Columella - just to name a few - who have become so well known for their extravagant meals from ancient Rome and feature sumptuous sauces, sweet-and-sour flavor juxtaposition, and masterful use of aromatic herbs all which make the simplest of foods simply amazing! Playing on the recipes served at various meal times throughout the daily life in Rome, our menu will be the perfect end to a warm May day.	SOLD OUT	SOLD OUT	Main Hall
